The Peter G. Peterson Foundation’s Fiscal Internship program in D.C.

Each summer, the Peter G. Peterson Foundation partners with think tanks in Washington D.C. to offer full-time paid internships to a select group of college and graduate students interested in fiscal and economic policy. Interns live and work in Washington D.C. for ten weeks during the summer while gaining professional experience, skills, and contacts that will serve them throughout their careers.

PGPF Fiscal Interns have the opportunity to:

- Live and work in our nation’s capital
- Work under the direct supervision of a respected scholar or economist
- Gain substantive policy research experience
- Join a diverse community of experts and students interested in budgetary and economic issues

The participating institutions’ work spans a variety of policy issues including healthcare, Social Security, infrastructure, economic policy, and tax policy.

Application deadline is February 12th
The Peter G. Peterson Foundation Fiscal Internship program is looking for a diverse group of talented students who are passionate about policy and good with numbers. The most successful candidates are ambitious, actively involved on campus or in their communities, and have demonstrated superior academic performance.

We seek applicants who have:

- An academic background in economics, political science, public policy, public administration, or a related field
- A demonstrated interest in fiscal and economic policy
- An aptitude for numbers
- Written communication skills
- An open mind and willingness to engage with those who share different opinions and beliefs
- A natural curiosity for learning new things
- A desire to live and work independently in Washington D.C.

Eligibility

Rising juniors, seniors, and graduate students are eligible to apply. Students must have completed at least two courses in economics, math, statistics, or political science, and have a working fluency with numbers. Experience with Microsoft Excel is highly recommended.
